

STANDARDS

World Customs' Organization (WCO) has set the foundation by the WCO SAFE Standard of Frameworks where the concept of accreditation of traders is one of the main building blocks. By accreditation of companies the quality of the companies' routines, security standards and compliance of are assured by the authorities

AEO - AUTHORISED ECONOMIC OPERATOR

The AEO acronym is widely used and refers to the accreditation concept used by the European Union. The AEO status can be given to any economic operator meeting the following common criteria: customs compliance, appropriate record-keeping, financial solvency and, where relevant, security and safety standards.

MUTUAL RECOGNITION

When implementing accreditation schemes it is important to consider international mutual recognition efforts to facilitate border crossing.

COMPANIES

In a world where global trade constantly increases safety and security is a challenge for Border Agencies. To address this different concepts of 'safety and security' have been introduced in many parts of the world to increase the safety and security of the supply chain.

Companies can be accredited which means the quality of their routines, security standards and compliance are reviewed and certified by the authorities.

The accreditation process ensures that their practices are acceptable and meet the required standards. The accreditation gives a company simplifications and the Government information of which companies that are compliant and cooperative. The control resources can then be focused on the non compliant.

TRAVELLERS

The concept of accreditation can also be applied on travellers. By offering travellers the possibility to become accredited, trustworthy and compliant travellers with no criminal records who meet the requirements set by the authorities can become accredited travellers. By using accreditation and state-of-the-art technology, accredited travellers can benefit from fast and predictable border crossings.
