

CONCLUSION

The term border management often refers to the procedures and the technology enablers that are applied to persons and objects crossing the border to ensure compliance with laws and regulations.

It also includes how different agencies are organized and how the physical infrastructure, building facilities and security arrangements are designed and managed.

Border Management is more than border control, it is the only way to effectively handle the challenge increased travel & trade pose to national security.

Border Management vs. Border Control

INTRODUCTION

The increase in trade & travel requires a change in how borders are managed in order to be able to provide a smooth movement of traffic with maintained safety and security.

Various kinds of controls including physical inspections are traditionally the tools for Border Agencies to exercise control.

Modern border management is a shift of paradigm where the need for security is balanced in a different way to meet the challenges of increased traffic and need for faster border crossing procedures.

COOPERATION

Securing and managing borders in a modern and efficient way is a complex task that involves many different government agencies and professional skill-sets.

Close cooperation with the private sector is essential. Business & trade are well positioned to identify risks in their international supply chain and to provide pre-information.

Successful border management also requires structured communication and cooperation with border agencies in other countries.

SINGLE WINDOW

An important tool for modern border management is the implementation of a Single Window solution, which will facilitate the collection, assessment and dissemination of relevant information.

PROCESSES

The individual approach from different border agencies - in terms of operating procedures, administrative competencies, resource constraints, and development ambitions - vary greatly. These local differences must be reflected in the design and implementation of border management modernisation processes.

Hence, the processes – the how and what of the daily work in your organization which will contribute to the overall objectives and goals – are your most important tool.

Modern management of your border processes will automatically benefit national as well as global security.

State-of-the-art Border Management is integrated Border Management which is when different Border Agencies review their processes together in order to better work towards the same goal – secured borders which still allow the efficient and smooth movement of people and goods.

RISK MANAGEMENT

Border Management requires modern risk management with an integrated approach capable of managing input from any stakeholder.

Through improved cooperation with access to pre-information, risk management will have a huge opportunity to succeed and becoming the crucial tool needed.
